Covid-19: Ladakh all set to have testing lab soon

Rinchen Angmo Chumikchan

LEH: The UT Ladakh administration is going to set up soon a BSL -2 laboratory in Chushot. This will be the first Molecular Diagnostic laboratory in Ladakh..

Since Ladakh doesn't have a BSL-2 laboratory, the Covid-19 case samples had to be sent to Delhi which takes two-three days to receive the report. As on April 29, 1949 samples have been sent to Delhi.

Besides COVID-19 testing, the new lab will work for a number of other important tests in Leh itself. In future, the lab equipment will be incorporated with the upcoming Medial College at Leh.

A team from SNM Hospital, Leh, including two doctors and four laboratory technicians, has been sent to PGI, Chandigarh, for a week's training.

Dr. Sonam Angmo, Head of the Pathologist Deptt, says, "We received one-week training at PGI, Chandigarh, in the Virology Department. The experience and exposure were really good. We were provided hands-on training. There is a lot of difference between practical and theory".

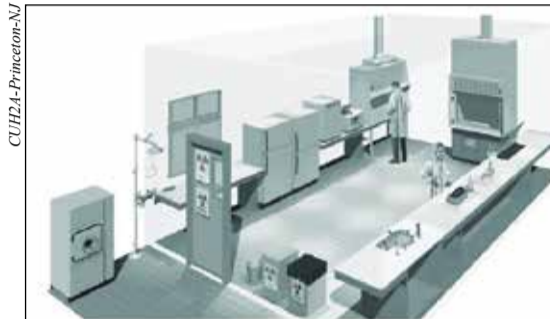

Besides, Dr Phuntsog Angchuk, Director, Health, UT, Ladakh, says that Prof Kunzang Chorol, from AIIMS, will also come here and train them in the beginning.

"Basically, we need microbiologist but we don't have it here in Ladakh, so we have sent two pathologist and four lab technician for training from PGI, Chandigarh. The fully-equipped BSL-2 lab is compliant with the Indian Council of Medical Research (ICMR) standards.

"Initially, we will conduct the tests here and send the same samples to Delhi as well to compare the results. This is the normal practice for any new laboratory", says Dr Angchuk.

The importance of a lab in Ladakh:

Earlier, the samples had to be sent to Delhi by flight, leading to delay and heavy expenditure, but now such tests can be conducted in Ladakh itself, after some time.

A-typical-Biosafety-Level-2-laboratory

Rigzin Samphel, Commissioner/ Secretary, Health, in an interview with Reach Ladakh, said, "It is very important to have such laboratory here in Ladakh. We have already taken up the issue with the government. As of now, we are sending the samples to Delhi and we receive the reports within one or two days."

Echoing the same views, Dr Angchuk says that "this is a milestone and is very important to have a laboratory in Ladakh because no one is able to say anything about this virus. For how long will it stay and whether it will be in wave 1 or wave 2. Right now, the virus is under control in Ladakh."

Jamyang Tsering Namgyal, MP, also believes that it is very important to have a laboratory here in Ladakh. "I had committed to UT Ladakh to get the laboratory. This was one of the top priorities of UT Ladakh."

Talking about the expenditure, he says, "The cost on us UT Ladakh Administration is almost nil because half of the equipment were brought from ICMR and the other half were donated by Pernod Ricad Company through their CSR funding. We have mobilized the resources, otherwise it would have cost around 50 lacs to 60 lacs to set up the laboratory."

Talking about the certificate of ICMR, he says, "When the lab is ready, the UT Ladakh administration will send the papers and I will intervene in getting the certificate from ICMR."

Scope of the laboratory:

Once the lab gets functional, it will be able to undertake many other tests like H1NI, influenza, needles, swine flu etc. Virology and pathological test also can be done.

Dr Sonam Angmo says, "Right now, we have Coronavirus cases and it is confirmatory for reverse transcription-polymerase chain reaction (RT-PCR). Besides, that we can do H1NI, influenza, needles, swine flu and others. In future also, it will be beneficial for us. We will have a proper virology set-up.

"Five rooms are enough for it. You need one room for bio hazard, decontamination room, PCR and others. It will take some time to set up. Let's hope that it will get started soon", adds Dr Sonam Angmo.

Talking about the generation of bio hazard waste, Dr. Angchuk says, "Not many wastes will be generated from this lab. What we can do is that we can bring an incinerator or autoclave to dispose that. The quantity of the waste will be not much."

Jamyang Tsering Namgyal and Dr Angchuk inform that the lab will be set up at Chushot in the forest budgeted accommodation (Guest House) which is 200-300 mtr away from Imam Bargha and not in use.

Dr Angchuk also says that work has already been started by PWD and PDD. PDD has already completed the installation of 100 kv transmitter. And other works like internal wiring, installation of sink will be done by Ladakh Development Authority as the building was constructed by them.

For the installation of the machines, expert engineers will be brought, and it would be completed within a month.

Stories from Ladakh

By Richa Maheshwari & Athulya Pillai

We met Sonam, a very cute little guy in 2nd standard, on the bus. We just bonded. He insisted that we go with him to his home in Garkon, and even began to cry when he asked us not to get down at Dha. But we were so selfish – we wanted to go to Dha, so that is what we were going to do.

After Dha, we decided to walk the five kilometres to Garkon to surprise Sonam. Have you guys been there? The entire village is built in a hill. From the outside, you will not realize that there is a village or any human habitation there. It is as if someone did not want the world to know that it exists. When we arrived, we started asking people if they knew where Sonam lived. They were like, "which Sonam?" Luckily we had taken a photo with him so we showed that.

Sonam got super overwhelmed to see us. He took us to his house and introduced us to his father and his two sisters. They insisted that we stay with them. Sonam's father must have been wondering about what to give us to eat because he offered us all the dried fruits they had. He told us about his fields and crops. He was not very old. Maybe in his late 20s.

The kids were playing and looking at videos of the places we had been to on our phone. They were clicking photos with us. They even took us to a secret swimming pond. When we returned, we saw that the father had called a couple of his friends. There were four people around the stove, cooking for the three of us!

We were slightly amused because none of this was expected. I mean, normally when you go to a place, you order food, stay in a hotel, and then come back to your regular life. We had never expected that something like this would happen. That we could enter someone's personal life. There is so much intimacy in that.

At night, we took our sleeping bags to the terrace. There was a mountain on each side, and in the center, there was a patch of sky with stars. This was not a very usual sight for us. Sleeping on someone's terrace was not usual but it was happening. And we were enjoying ourselves. I don't know if it is the lens I wear to see my Ladakh trip, but there was a lot of magic to the things that happened there.

Take full charge of your life

When you say, 'Take full charge of your life', you mean that you need to control your life in a manner that goes well with the objectives of your life. And the objectives are those that you have resolved to achieve in life. It is quite possible that one has many things to achieve in life, and most of them may come at different stages of life, depending upon your priorities and determination.

To give an example from my own experience, I had set, broadly, five things to make a success story, resolved soon after my university days. Now that all those resolutions, except for one, are accomplished, I have set for myself another set of resolutions that need to come true before I have to bid bye-bye to dear life!

I know I am fully responsible for all the pluses and minuses of my life, and, therefore, I also know that I have to be fully responsible now onwards too. That makes me feel that I can't blame anyone, even circumstances, for whatever goes wrong.

As a result, one gets one more chance to succeed, fully knowing well that you and you alone are responsible for your successes and failures. That means that only a sense of full control of your life helps you do things directed at achieving your goals.

It is quite possible that you may have to take a series of endless steps, one by one, determinedly, in order to reach your goal. That is normal and such things have happened with most of the achievers. A continuous effort, meticulously planned, is the only way to go as one can't sit back and keep crying.

In such cases, one can do one thing: Look within, and see how many good things have happened in your life. You will get a new ray of hope, and it is quite likely that you pick up the threads where you left them. And your dream would be about to be realised!

Reminiscing a mountain of dreams achieved

Thinles Norboo

As the Covid-19 lockdown has forced us to stay indoors to ensure that the dreaded virus can be contained. This unprecedented lockdown has made people value their freedom which was taken for granted before they were confined to their houses. And, today, most of us, including celebrities, do reminisce our dream journeys on social media. In these ‘throwback’ times, wouldn’t it be wonderful to retrace the journey of Tsering Ladol who had conquered the great Mt. Everest, the earth’s highest mountain at the young age of 15.

Tsering Ladol spent her childhood in the Changthang region in Ladakh, located 270 km southeast of Leh district. Inhabited by Changpas, the pastoral nomads who practice yak, sheep and goat rearing as a part of their subsistence, Changthang was completely undeveloped during that time. “I completed my primary school in Changthang after which I had shifted to Spituk. Post my Class X exams, I went to Leh for higher studies. It was while studying in the Girls Higher Secondary School in Leh that I got the opportunity to join National Cadet Corps (NCC),” says Tsering, who believes that the spark for mountaineering took off when she became a cadet.

Tsering was born in one of the highest and toughest regions of the world. She grew up looking at the great Himalayas and trekking through the steep mountains. The relationship between Tsering and mountains was an old one, so the idea of climbing mountains wasn’t completely new for her. It came naturally to this young girl who was fascinated by the snow-clad, sky-touching peaks.

“I was well aware of the strength, both physical and mental, required to climb the Mount Everest. However, it was my fascination towards exploring the greatness of this tough terrain that pushed me towards climbing Mt. Everest; and to my surprise, I was able to scale it in my first attempt,” shares Tsering, recalling the journey of her lifetime, adding that the credit for her success certainly goes to Dr. Norboo and his family members with whom she had stayed in Spituk.

The scaling of the summit isn’t as easy as it appears when one starts putting it into words. One has to live the experience to understand the diversity and severity of challenges the journey throws at those trying to put their foot on Everest.

“I had received adequate training in Phyang, Siachen Glacier, in Utarakhand and Delhi. This prepared me to scale Everest from the

Tsering Ladol on top of Mt. Everest

North face which is from China’s side and is considered to be hardest,” says Tsering.

Cadet Tsering Ladol was part of the Indian Army’s Women’s Everest Expedition which conquered the world’s highest peak on June 2, 2005. The team which set out to conquer Mt. Everest consisted of 9 members, 5 men and 4 women. Apart from Tsering Ladol, the other 3 women members were Capt. Sipra Majumdar, Capt. Ashwini Pawar and Dechen Lhamo from the Nepal special frontier force. They were the first women from the Indian Army to have taken part in such an expedition.

While climbing, it wasn’t only the adrenaline rush but also the fear of the dead bodies she saw on her way that kept her going. “There were so many dead bodies lying on the journey to the peak. Suddenly, a scary thought started haunting me. I was asking myself if I had gone there to die? I had already climbed 8,500 meters when my head torch fell on the face of a dead person. Even today I don’t remember if I was hallucinating or that dead person started laughing at me! Somehow, I started moving ahead, and when I looked back after a while, that dead person seemed to be following me. I gathered all my strength and managed to climb towards the peak. I still think as if that dead person was there to make my journey easier. It was on June 2, 2005, that I had completed the journey to the greatest mountain peak,” says Tsering who was so overwhelmed after completing the summit that she couldn’t open eyes for several minutes.

Tsering Ladol in 2nd position in Snow Skating at Khelo India Winter Games held at Gulmarg in March 2020.

It was the moment that made her think that she had conquered all her dreams and fears, but that feeling was momentary. Soon after coming back, Tsering’s priority was to get a government job keeping in mind the poor financial condition of her family. It is important to note here that in 2005, there were not many employment opportunities in Ladakh. Tsering applied for many jobs – from the highest to the lowest post - but nothing turned out in her favour.

“I received awards and recognition for my feat, but my priority was to get a job at which I failed. I was enlisted in State Award 2005, Raksha Mantri Padak in 2008 and the Himalaya Hero award in 2018. All these awards and no job disappointed me a little,” rues Tsering, but the champ she is, she continued to break the gender stereotypes and is today working as a snow skating instructor in Gulmarg, Srinagar.

Tsering’s journey from the remote journey of Changthang to scaling the heights of the gigantic mountain is truly inspirational. She is one of those several courageous women who have challenged and ventured into the territories which were earlier meant only for men. She has set an example for the younger generation in Ladakh and has inspired them to leave no stone unturned when it comes to achieving their life goals!
