MC, Leh, strives towards eliminating manual scavenging

Launches the world's first robotic scavenger 'Bandicoot' on a trial basis

During the launch of Bandicoot Robot, on a trial basis, to eliminate manual scavenging in Leh.

Deachen Spaldon & Tsewang Norbu

LEH: While India celebrates Azadi ka Amrit Mahotsav, commemorating 75 glorious years of progressive India and its rich history, culture, and achievements, a section of people in India who do manual scavenging dive into sewer tanks to flush out stagnant filth inside.

The Employment of Manual Scavengers and Construction of Dry Latrines (Prohibition) Act, 1993 defines 'Manual Scavenger' as "a person engaged in or employed for manually carrying human excreta". The employment of manual scavengers is prohibited as a criminal offence.

Govt of India has passed certain acts to prohibit manual scavenging such as -

- The Employment of Manual Scavengers and Construction of Dry Latrines (Prohibition) Act, 1993
- The Prohibition of Employment as Manual Scavengers and their Rehabilitation Act 2013 or M.S. Act 2013

• Prohibition of Employment as Manual Scavengers and their Rehabilitation (Amendment) Bill, 2020

Despite that, 472 manual scavenging deaths across the country have been recorded between 2016 and 2020 and 26 in 2021 according to Bezwada Wilson, national convener of the Safai Karmachari Andolan.

Figures seem dismal yet major initiatives have been started for the prohibition as well as rehabilitation of the people working in this field.

The issue of manual scavenging in Leh is not as huge as in big metropolitan cities but with growing modernization and lifestyle change of the people, the problem cannot be ignored.

Areas like Diskital often face choked drainage issues resulting in flooding of the wastewater in parks and roads.

Aiming to mechanize sewer cleaning,

Institutions, he also stated that the main challenge is to make education accessible for all so that Students with disabilities can have opportunities for equal participation across the educational system.

On December 10, the Lieutenant Governor of Ladakh, RK Mathur, today attended the valedictory programme of the two-day conclave. A draft of the four-year undergraduate curriculum framework based on NEP-2020 was released.

A tripartite Memorandum of Understanding (MoU) was signed between the Ladakh Skill Development Mission, the University of Ladakh, and various Sector Skill Councils for the introduction of skill/vocational courses, setting up of lab infrastructure, implementation of skill development programs in colleges, ITIs and government schools of Ladakh to enhance the employability of youth of Ladakh through various training.

Terming NEP-2020 as an instrument of changing society, LG Mathur emphasized that a lot of preparation is involved before the four-year undergraduate course is launched in Ladakh. He stressed the need for a periodical review to iron out glitches and to ensure that the students along with the teaching staff are both physically and mentally prepared for its implementation. He appreciated the participants of all the constituent colleges for reaching a consensus and producing the four-year UG curriculum framework for its implementation from the next academic session 2023-24.

LG Mathur advised the University of Ladakh and Higher Education Department that a target may be fixed to provide certification to the skilled population of Ladakh and produce a degree holder in a skilled area to change the perception and psychology of the people to ensure that various trades get the respect they deserve. He suggested that every single constituent college of the University of Ladakh may have a Memorandum of Understanding (MoU) with other universities to seek help from outside to strengthen the education system and to get support for the credit system so that the University of Ladakh is at par with the best universities of the country.

He emphasised the need to make concerted efforts to upgrade the infrastructure and resolve issues of teaching/non-teaching staff to develop a platform for the overall growth and strengthening of the University of Ladakh and the Higher Education Department.

LG Mathur stressed the need for an institutionalized mechanism through regular meetings with students to prepare the groundwork for the implementation of the four-year undergraduate courses in colleges in Ladakh. He emphasised the need for teaching and non-teaching staff of the University of Ladakh to develop a strong and harmonious relationship with students for strong performances and good results.

Terming the University of Ladakh as a young university, LG Mathur stated an ecosystem may be developed that is unique to Ladakh to lay a strong foundation for academics as well as the culture of the University.

contribute towards Mission Zero Manual Scavenging, and aid in achieving the goals of the Swachh Bharat Mission, Municipal Committee, Leh launched Bandicoot Robot, on a trial basis.

The World's First Robotic Scavenger 'Bandicoot' is designed and developed by Genrobotics, a national award-winning Start-up, to eliminate manual intervention from cleaning confined spaces like sewer manholes and provide a safer workspace for sanitation workers. Bandicoot is a major technological innovation to build a manual scavenging-free India.

Executive Officer, Municipal Committee Leh, Stanzin Rabgais informed that Genrobotics' Bandicoot was procured after seeing their operational performance in 17 States and UTs of the country. He stressed that this initiative would successfully promote the Safai Mitra Suraksha Challenge, launched by the Ministry of Housing and Urban Affairs, by implementing mechanical tools for cleaning sewers and ending manual scavenging.

The robot has been brought to Leh on a trial basis to prohibit manual scavenging and promote the dignity and livelihood of the sanitation workers here in the region, he added.

He further added that keeping given health and safety while cleaning the manholes manually, such an initiative brings about a big transformation in this field. Manhole-to-machine hole is the concept behind it. In addition to that, demos and training are being given to the sanitation workers to understand the proper operation of the machine.

Bandicoot Robot consists of two units, a stand unit, and a robotic drone unit. The robotic drone unit with a multi-functioning robotic arm dives into the manholes for cleaning or unblocking operations. The customizable diving depth of the robotic drone, with added features of carbon fiber body, smart user interface, 4 IP68 proof cameras, operational assistance, and corrosive resistance enables the robot to perform its operation in any hazardous or corrosive sewerage environments effectively for a longer period.

When asked about the policies and regulations from the government regarding the third-party workers cleaning dry toilets in the region, he mentioned that registration of the workers has been done in the Municipal Committee, Leh. A dedicated helpline is being maintained by the same for any household needing to get connected with the workers, whereby charges will be maintained and decided by the workers themselves.

As the health and safety of the workers are of utmost priority, Stanzin Rabgais mentioned that proper safety gear and equipment such as masks, PPE kit, and boots are being ensured by MCL.

On the topic of the survey conducted by the government of India every year - Swachh Survekshan and where Ladakh stands on it, he mentioned that both Leh and Kargil city participated in the survey. UT Ladakh's ranking in this survey was 144th last year which has been improved this year to 70th position and hoping that the ranking will further improve in the coming years.

People's Voice

Interviewed by Tsewang Norbu and Deachen Spaldon

Today it's been more than three years since the inception of Ladakh as a Union Territory. On 31st October 2019, the state of Jammu and Kashmir was dissolved and replaced by two new union territories, through a reorganization act passed by the Parliament of India. The movement for this demand initially gained momentum in the early 1960s. Passing through a great ordeal of struggles and sacrifice of people, the long-awaited dream of Ladakh finally took its shape on 31st October 2019.

Ladakh and its people have come a long way since then, but it wasn't long before the crux of this dream realized many. Many apprehensions regarding the granting of UT without safeguards emerged among people.

The government of India launched various socio-economic and welfare schemes such as Pradhan Mantri Gram Sadak Yojana (PMGSY), Jal Jeevan Mission, etc. There is no denying the fact that the implementation of these schemes and projects has been a great success in many places, however behind these wonderful schemes and ideas the concerns and expectations of people are being left unfulfilled. For instance, people are worried about how outside influence on tourism will burden the fragile ecology of the environment, likewise, the same influence on businesses will lead to the vanishing of local produce in the market eventually leading up to the loss of livelihoods. Then there is the demand of schedule 6 – for safeguards of rights through the power of autonomy by creating Autonomous District Councils while also protecting the ethnic culture and language.

The main concern, however, is- the crisis of unemployment in the region. Unavailability of job vacancies and not getting any fresh opportunities is eventually taking a toll on mental health among youngsters.

While taking the streets of Leh and having a conversation with the locals – our team observed mixed reactions from them regarding the three years of UT Ladakh.

TSEWANG RIGZIN, Shop Keeper at Moti Market: Union Territory is great for Ladakh but there is still the problem of no jobs for my children, which is the main issue for me. Although the development has been immense in both towns and villages, like good roads, street lights in the Choglamsar area, and drinking water. The phone network is still an issue as sometimes it is not available on BSNL and Airtel which is a hindrance for Net banking and daily e-commerce transactions (Google pay) with customers.

One more problem is that I have been paying GST bills but the inflation is rising every year and the products I sell are getting costlier every year like a product that used to cost ₹500 is now ₹550 and doesn't tend to get any cheaper and customer doesn't want to pay as they were cheaper last year. The rise in fuel prices increased wage rates in factories, and transport charges also increase the cost of the product. Some customers understand but some don't.

Many shopkeepers are outsiders and they leave as soon as tourists are gone, the shops in the main market remain closed until next summer. Ladakhi should open more shops and there are no Ladakh wholesalers in Leh, I feel Ladakh youth should involve in this market sector as there is huge potential to earn money.

STANZIN JORDAN, Entrepreneur from Sankar: As an upcoming entrepreneur, there are lots of government schemes, and we can enrich them on the grassroots level. There is a gap, many programs start but their lack of continuation which results in less benefit for us.

There are some changes overall but there is a lack of planning as around my house their goods but now they dug up for water pipeline and didn't bother to put it together after. Still, we don't get water but the old water tap is still running. Before in summer, we used to get water but now that is also stopped, even I saw in villages they are getting water but I don't see that in Leh as we used a good water supply before. Destroying old running infrastructure I didn't like it. But far-flung villages getting house water taps is a good initiative by the government.

Also, there has been a rise in the prices of daily groceries like vegetable oils, LPG, etc. Earlier Ladakh used to be self-sufficient, we consume what we produce so I feel that we as youth who are interested in farming should work on it and youth should adopt a sustainable way of doing business.

Having job opportunities is very important as some may not have an interest in farming or entrepreneurship as there is a staff shortage in the government department. So the recruitment process should be fast as I don't agree with the contractual appointment concept which is given to the outside company as there is no job security, in this matter UT Ladakh should take notice.

MADAM DOLMA, School teacher/Chuchot: I feel there was more organization to raise voices for women before UT was formed. As a teacher, I see female students who don't know about the menstrual cycle. At the school level, we provide awareness but the children who don't go to school or not had a good education should be provided awareness about health and hygiene. Job opportunities especially for women are not present like before for teachers and so on.

In terms of development, I don't see much change. The roads are still in the old condition in my village there must be a change in other areas. In some parts, they dug up land for pipelines under Jal Jeevan Yojana and did not cover it up. The much-hyped development should be seen as practical on the ground also.

National Mathematics day

December 22, the birth anniversary of India's famed mathematician Srinivasa Ramanujan, is celebrated as National Mathematics Day. Ramanujan was considered a gifted mathematician, as he resolved some of the 'unsolvable' equations and presented significant mathematical analysis. He is regarded as one of the world's greatest mathematicians on a national and global level.

Born in 1887 in Tamil Nadu, Ramanujan spent most of his life in poverty. He developed a keen interest in mathematics from a young age, and by 15, he obtained a copy Elementary Results in Pure and Applied Mathematics by George Shoobridge Carr's Synopsis. In 1918, he was invited as a member of the London Mathematical Society in Britain and became the youngest Fellow of the Royal Society. Ramanujan's works were recognized by British mathematicians like G.H. Hardy, who was spellbound by his knowledge of advanced mathematics.

In 2012, the former Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh marked this day as National Mathematics Day to pay tribute to the legendary Srinivasa Ramanujan.

DID YOU KNOW

Madhopatti village IAS officers

- Ramanujan's mathematical genius was such that he discovered his own theorems and independently compiled 3900 results.

- Cranberries are commonly referred to as "bounce berries" because they bounce when they're ripe. In fact, bouncing cranberries is a common ripeness test for farmers and consumers alike.

- The most prolific egg-laying chicken was in Missouri in 1979. The chicken laid 371 eggs in one year, according to Guinness World Records.

- A small village in the Jaunpur district of Uttar Pradesh, Madhopatti has created history by producing the most number of IAS officers. With about 75 households, it has given 47 officers to Indian administration. Not just that, many from the same village have made their careers by joining prestigious organisations like ISRO, Bhabha Atomic Research Centre and World Bank. Ask the villagers about their study schedules, maybe? (Source-Indiatimes.com).

Religion key to harmonious living

Of late, I have been very choosy about going out for functions. The 'very must', from my point of view, are accepted. No wonder, the latest function of a book-release by a great friend had to be welcomed!

Dr (Father) M D Thomas is a well-known and respected figure in the intellectual circles of Delhi. His latest book, RELIGION FOR HARMONIOUS LIVING, has come out when it is needed the most. With the world gone crazy, all set to destroy each other, Father Thomas has made a fervent appeal to the world leaders of all kinds to see reasons against the foolishness of the destruction senselessly and unthinkingly. His thematic stress that God is one and we are brothers and sisters under one big umbrella has the resonance of the very finest elements of all religions. It is the way the principles of a peaceful and progressive life is interpreted, knowingly or unknowingly, by our leaders that have harmed mankind the hardest.

Father Thomas has a universal appeal because of his attitude of love, kindness and sympathy towards all who are basically same and the sons and daughters of God who had created us all with a mission and a purpose of spreading peace and harmony. Unfortunately, we invoke God but go against his very basic principles of good and peaceful living, which, to any sane person, is nothing but madness and the surety of a very irresponsible life.

It is in this respect that the book analyses the positive and the negative aspects of religions in a realistic manner. No wonder, those present at the book-launch function were all praise for Father Thomas who has a PhD degree in Hindi. A scholar par excellence, Father Thomas has devoted his entire life for a harmonious living and peaceful sharing of the resources of the Earth.

At a time when we are so much blood-thirsty, it is religion alone that can bring about harmonious living, but our leaders have to stop being 'divisive elements'.

In Conversation with Yutaka Hirako, Programme Director / Project Architect Tibet Heritage Fund / Leh Old Town Initiative

Interviewed by Tsewang Norbu

Q. Share with us about yourself.

My name is Yutaka Hirako, Japanese nationality, born in 1974. I did my vocational course in Chinese from Japan and then moved to China. There I bought a bicycle to travel to Tibet and was fascinated by nature, the landscape of Tibet, and people living in tough conditions. The journey made me more curious about Tibet culture. So I decided to have another bicycle journey from Xinjiang-west Tibet- Mt. Kailash to Lhasa. During that winter I met the organization Tibet Heritage fund (NGO), they were doing the preservation and conservation of heritage buildings in Tibet local. I met the directors of THF, Pimpim De Azevedo from Portugal and Andre Alexandre from Germany. Initially, I started working with them as a volunteer in 1998 since I was working in different parts of the Himalayan region like Mongolia. THF, Director Andre visited Ladakh in 2003 with a recommendation to see Ladakh's old town heritage architecture similar to Tibet. Based on his experience we started working in Ladakh with small projects in the old town of Leh. We wanted to work with local people to restore residential houses which lead to the formation of the Leh Old Town initiative (LOTI). In 2011, I got my Japanese architecture license.

Q. What inspires you to work in the conservation sector?

It all started in Tibet, the spark you can say, as I come from Japan which is much more modern with materials and comforts. But in Tibet I saw a big gap, people were living in hard conditions and with no freedom under the Chinese. The devotion to praying as a Buddhist made me a shock; on my way to Lhasa, I saw many people doing Gochag, a journey of 1000's km. They were very content and smiling. It would be impossible to see someone doing this in Japan. I realized that material-wise there was no comparison to Japan but they pray for the next life to get better. When I reached Lhasa town, I would describe it as "living heritage" the old buildings continued in use, and the co-founder Pimpim De Azevedo took me to the old house which was under development, the house had memories of the family-like marking off the height of children and losar and cultural decorations. I feel if the house is the body then people are the soul. The soul and body must be together. So it was important to preserve not just houses but also support the people living there and improve the living conditions to conserve the living heritage.

Q. What are the challenges faced in Ladakh during restoration?

The initial challenge was people were not interested in restoring their heritage houses as they decided to move out and build new houses closer to farmland and also due to problems with the water supply. The change in lifestyle due to tourism as they built guest houses and the old town of Leh lost its use. People from different parts of Ladakh like Nubra and Zaskar started to live in old townhouses either on rent or bought them. We did a survey and proposed to restore the houses on half cost born by the owner and half provided by THF. We provided technical knowledge while working with local craftsmen. Slowly people started to see the possibility of living, by bringing in facilities of electricity, and water supply, and having a good quality of living in historic houses.

The senior citizen finds difficulty living in the cemented building due to poor insulation to cold in winter. The need for lots of heating arrangements in concrete houses which quickly absorb the heat but also quickly release the heat which is vice-versa to old Ladakhi architecture buildings, having more habitable living conditions. Old houses of Ladakh are built with natural materials like wood, and mud to maintain heat. So by restoration, we feel we are providing sustainable living spaces.

Q. What were the feedbacks and responses from locals after restoration work?

The response from locals has changed from being hesitant to restore and now the competition of many houses. Also, people now request to restore outside Leh town with bearing full costs like current projects in Saboo Zims Khang and Matho Khar.

Q. Did you get any support from the government of Leh, Ladakh?

Initially, we had an MOU with Hill Council and work together but it did not result in the policy-level stage. It is important to have regulations on how to conserve the buildings. For this, it is important to have government support as we can only propose but regulations and laws are in the hands of the government. After UT was formed Kaga Rigzin Samphel, the then Commissioner/ Secretary also suggested and agreed on the effort of making old Leh town a heritage site.

MESSAGE TO THE READERS

“Ladakh is very much dependent on tourism and the old town has potential in the tourism sector but it must be handled with care. Old town Leh cannot be only for tourists without the native locals in it.”

In Conversation with Yutaka Hirako

This year Stanzin Chosphel, EC, Art and Culture, LAHDC, Leh, and I worked together on heritage regulations in the countryside for Mane and Stupas and created a special fund on the Panchayat level for restoration.

Q. How do you see the future of conservation and tourism's effect on it?

The important thing is to have a living heritage where locals are residing and tourists or visitors are welcome but they respect the space. As historic places are interesting and have different cultural atmospheres to experience and learn to grow culturally to other customs.

It is important for people to still live otherwise like many places after becoming heritage sites the local people start disappearing. Many tourists bring monetary opportunity but eventually become Disney land and are occupied for business. Eventually, the city loses its charm and it would be artificial and slowly it would die and we have asked ourselves historic town owed by whom? That's why I emphasize having a living heritage. We work closely with local people. We built our office in the middle of the old town in a heritage house by living close we know more about the conditions of other heritage houses.

I know Ladakh is very much dependent on tourism and the old town has potential in the tourism sector but it must be handled with care. Old town Leh cannot be only for tourists without the native locals in it.

The natural challenges are still there to regain habitation as the town is laid on rock structures so laying water pipes lines and sewage or drainage is very tough, especially for tourists, that is why we recommend dry toilets.

Q. What is your message to the locals of Ladakh?

These days people coin the heritage word now and then but I feel the word heritage means which is something inherited from ancestors, like stupas or palaces. So it is important to conserve not just the buildings but the stories, and folk tales, which must be passed down to future generations. But it is not just in Ladakh but everywhere I see people tend to remove old and change to new. On one hand, it must be true. Not just tangible heritage but intangible heritage the language customs, eating habits, rituals, and celebrations like Losar.

The custom of churpon and the irrigation water distribution system in the village is also very important. As Ladakh is very hard to live so these customs of supporting each other created a social bond that is hard to find out in the world.
